3. Cut out many small shapes out of different colored paper and glue them on the paper and shapes..

For younger children, you could provide some already cut out shapes.

Directed Drawing

The Directed Drawing page is for the parent. Beginning with step 1, the parent must show the child what to do while also speaking the directions.

The child follows step by step. Allow them to color it when finished.

Many children may become discouraged that their drawing does not look exactly like the parent's. Remind them that it is their own piece of work. Their job is to follow the directions and try their best. Everyone's art is supposed to be UNIQUE!

Lines create Pictures

discussion read aloud

When you draw a picture you always use some type of line, don't you? If you draw a happy face you will need a circle (which is really a curved line that never ends!) for the outside and a curved line for the mouth. It is impossible to draw a picture without lines!

Look at this picture (show The Swan). What is it a picture of? What kinds of lines do you see? (allow for a response)

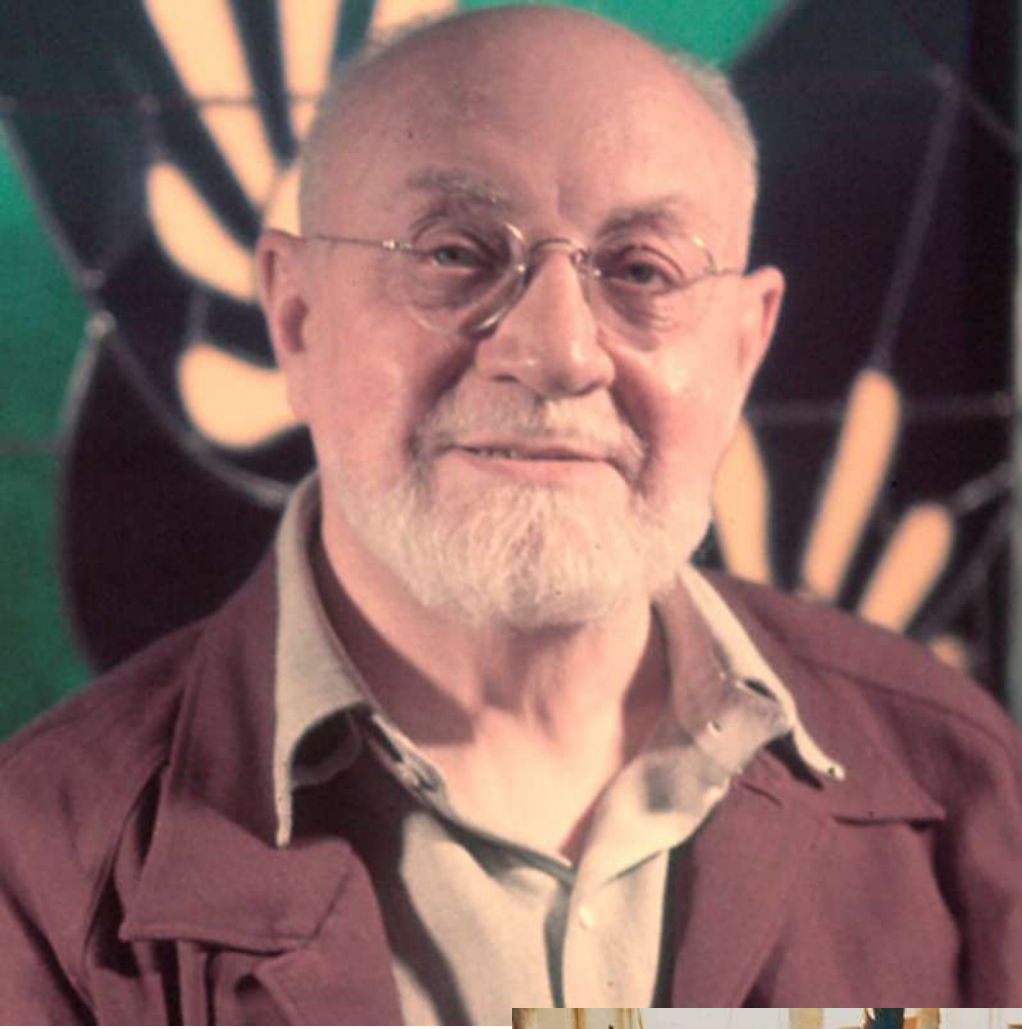

This is a drawing by a man named Henri Matisse (show his picture). Look at the long curved lines he used for the swan's neck. And look at the straight lines that he used for the wings. Each line is very important.

Henri Matisse was born in France in 1869 (that's over 150 years ago!). When he was young he got sick and had to stay in bed. To keep him from being bored, his mom got him some different art supplies. It was then that he fell in love with art and painting. He painted many famous paintings over his lifetime and was best known for his bright colors.

Later in his life he got sick again. This time he was not able paint. Not being able to make art made him very sad. One day he discovered that he could use scissors to make lines. And this began a new form of art for him. (show cut out pictures) He would cut different, brightly colored shapes. He would then use these cut outs to create a new piece of art.
