Lupine Flowers

Have you ever seen a Lupine flower in bloom? They are really quite beautiful! Though they are typically purple and blue they can also be found in pink and white. A long sturdy stem holds up pea-like flowers that are clustered into long spikes. These tall flowers ( they can grow up to 5 feet) really are a breathtaking sight! You would see these beauties between the months of May and July. Though if you live in a place that is hot and humid you may not find the Lupine flower. Lupines do not do well in heat and humidity. They prefer places where the summers are cool, like in the dry open fields and wooded areas of the Pacific northwest. If you ever see a Lupine flower, I hope you have a camera handy, You sure will want to capture their beauty!
